TWO MORE EXPLOSION VICTIMS DIE; BRINGING TOTAL TO THREE FATALITIES; ROHM & HAAS BLAST PROBE CONTINUES

Doyle L. Stiner, 407 Radcliffe Street, and Walter R. Kornfeld, Philadelphia, Are Latest To Succumb—13 Others Injured Reported As Improving—Thomas Neely, Rockledge, the First to Die, Had Exchanged Shifts With Ill Co-Worker

Deaths of two more young men late last evening raised the fatalities in the explosion at the Rohm & Haas Company plant here to three.

The latest victims, one a resident of Bristol, and one of Philadelphia, died at 10 o'clock in two different hospitals, approximately 24 hours after the blast which caused a trio of deaths, injury to 13 others, and shattered sections of a building at the huge Rohm & Haas plant at the southern section of the borough.

The two who succumbed last evening are:

Doyle LeRoy Stiner, aged 24, of 407 Radcliffe street.

Walter R. Kornfeld, aged 21, of 4162 Barnett street, Philadelphia.

Today families of the two young men went sadly about the duties of making arrangements for their funerals. Stiner, who was married, had lived in Bristol for nearly two years. Kornfeld was single.

The 13 others who were injured in the blast were reported by their attending physicians as improving nicely, many having already been discharged from hospitals and returned to their homes, and some having been taken immediately to their homes following treatment just after the explosion.

Meanwhile company officials are making a thorough investigation in order to determine just what caused the catastrophe.

Stiner and his wife lived at 407 Radcliffe street. The young man had been employed by the Rohm & Haas Co. for nearly two years. He was a graduate of Bloomsburg high school, in which city he previously resided. When fatally injured he was engaged on his regular shift at the local plant.

Surviving the young man are his wife, Catherine Stiner; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lehman Stiner, and a sister, Mrs. John Paulhamus, of Monroe street; and his grandmother, Mrs. Elizabeth Werkheiser, Bloomsburg.

Arrangements have been made for services and burial at Bloomsburg. Friends may call at the Molder funeral home here on Thursday evening, between 6:30 and 8:30. The young man was a member of an Evangelical church in that city.

Kornfeld, who would have marked his 22nd birthday anniversary next month, was employed as a chemical technician at the local plant, being located there since last June. His regular shift was a day-time one, but as was frequently his custom he remained for overtime work. He was a graduate of Frankford high school, and also a graduate of Temple University, Philadelphia, where he majored in physical chemistry.

Surviving Kornfeld are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Kornfeld, Philadelphia; two sisters, Mrs. Herbert Leinbach and Miss Ruth Kornfeld, of that city; and two brothers, Edmund, a graduate student at Harvard University, Mass.; and George, of Philadelphia.

The funeral service will be conducted at the home of his parents on Saturday afternoon, with burial in Mt. Vernon cemetery, Philadelphia. Friends may call Friday evening.

Kornfeld had sustained severe burns of the face, arms and legs; while Stiner suffered a fracture of the skull, and severe burns on the face and hands. He had also inhaled flames, it is stated.

Officials are continuing their investigation, both at the scene of the explosion and at the plant.

"PEEPING TOM" DEFINED BY OLD ENGLISH LAW

By International News Service

TRIAL, B. C.—(INS)—A statute dating back to the 14th Century was invoked in Trial recently when Neil Haig was charged as a "peeping Tom." He pleaded guilty and received a suspended sentence.

The wording of the charge was that he "acted in a manner likely to cause a breach of the peace, to wit, by peeping at night through the windows of a house."

The statute has been unchanged in English law since 1350.

IN ARREARS $2500 ON SUPPORT ORDER FOR HIS DAUGHTER

John M. Geddes, Wycombe, Must Show Cause Why He Should Not Pay

ORDER WAS $4 A WEEK

Defendant Says He Got Into Arrears When He Was Out of Employment

DOYLESTOWN, Mar. 3—Over $2500 in arrears on a support order of $4 per week to be paid to his former wife toward their daughter's support, John H. Geddes, 47, of Wycombe, was before the Quarter Sessions Court here yesterday afternoon to show cause why the order should not be paid.

Testimony was produced to show that during the past 11½ years the defendant had paid only $250 toward the support of his daughter, Cora, who will graduate in two months from the Womelsdorf high school, and who expects to study nursing at the Reading Hospital, after graduating from high school.

Geddes was divorced from his first wife, Mrs. Margaret Geddes, who brought this proceedings, and married again, his present wife being a topper at a Dublin hosiery mill where she earns $25 a week. Geddes himself earns about $50 a week at the Frankford Arsenal where he has been employed for the past two years.

Geddes explained to the court that he got in the arrears while he was out of work 11 years ago, and explained that he never paid anything on the order because his first wife did not make a demand for payment. She divorced him in 1932.

Mrs. Geddes, the defendant's first wife, is a former resident of Doylestown, and is now a matron at the Bethany Orphanage at Womelsdorf. She testified that she has supported her daughter herself for the past 11½ years and has made it possible for her to be able to graduate from high school and to start studying nursing, and that all her father ever paid was the $250 back in August, 1932.

Geddes formerly sold insurance here.

LATEST NEWS BULLETINS

Germany Rocked With 7th Consecutive Night Raid

London—Royal Air Force squadrons rocked Germany with a seventh consecutive night raid, the Air Ministry announced today as dispatches from the continent said Berlin was still digging out of smoldering ruins left by the greatest bombing ever made on the Nazi capital.

The assault was centered on industrial areas of western Germany.

Planes of the bomber command at the same time planted mines in Axis-controlled waters. Three bombers were reported missing.

Wipe Out 75% of Japanese Barracks on Salween

With the American Air Force in China—Accurate American bombing today wiped out 75 per cent of the Japanese barracks area on the Salween River front along the Yunnan-Burma border.

Lieut. Donald Brookfield, of Philadelphia, at the same time avenged an incident of two weeks ago when his plane was shot down under him at the same spot. The American bombers spent a half hour over the target making several bomb runs. Then the Warhawk fighters which had escorted the bombers to the target spent another half hour strafing the ground from low altitude in order to prevent the Japs from putting out the numerous fires which had been started.

Axis Thrusts On Tunisian Front Stopped "Dead"

Allied Headquarters in North Africa—With all Axis thrusts on the Tunisian front stopped dead by American and British troops, the North African Air Force carried out a devastating new attack on the port of Tunis today.

Huge American Flying Fortresses attacked shipping and port installations in the harbor coincident with other aerial assaults against Axis ground positions.

German forces in northeast Tunisia relaxed their assaults in the Beja and Medjez-El-Bah areas, while Allied troops maintained pressure against Nazi units which sought in vain to puncture the lines held by the British First Army and French units.

Royal Air Force Hurricane bombers and Spitfires kept up a heavy pounding of Axis troop concentrations, transport columns, tanks and gun emplacements, scoring direct hits on one encampment which started large fires. A transport and tank column in the Mateur was badly shot up.

Five enemy fighter planes were destroyed yesterday, while one Allied craft is missing.

To Erect Honor Roll At Fire Co. Plot in Edgely

EDGELY, Mar. 3—At a public meeting of Edgely Civic Association held in Mintzer's Hall last evening it was decided to have an honor roll erected on the fire company lot at the corner of Edgely avenue and Shunpike Road, this being the most central location suggested.

It is planned to place shrubbery around the honor roll and otherwise decorate the spot.

When the erection is completed a suitable dedication program will be conducted.

The collection at present totals $222.33.

WINTER RETURNS WITH 1-INCH FALL OF SNOW

Freezing Temperatures Arrive; Mercury Goes Down To 21 This Morning

FORECAST MORE SNOW

Temperatures below the freezing mark were accompanied by snowfall during the night and early morning hours which covered the ground with a quarter inch blanket of white.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 3, 1943

REUNION OF ALLIES

New York City saw a parade the other day that could be duplicated in Britain and in Africa, but probably nowhere else on earth—at the moment.

It was a parade in which nearly 1,000 French sailors and marines from the battleship Richelieu and the cruiser Montcalm swung up Broadway in company with a detachment of British sailors and units of United States soldiers, sailors, marines and coast guards. The French were on their way to a reception at city hall. They were armed, as befits Allies. Bayonets gleamed as platoon after platoon of the French navy men marched between rows of spectators and through traditional showers of ticker tape.

The French are in this country while their ships are refitted for war—war against the German conquerors and exploiters of their homeland. Their feelings were expressed by Vice Admiral Raymond A. Fenard, chief of the French naval mission in the United States. He said they were not here to make speeches but to prepare to fight.

"We cannot change the past," he said, "but it is not too late, thank Heaven, for France to resume her place in the fight for her right to live. It is not too late for her sons, weak yet but gaining in strength and sustained by their gallant Allies, to take a new share in the struggle—not only to live but that the reasons that make life worth living should continue to exist."

The men of the French navy who took part in the New York parade are but the vanguard of those who will come to have their vessels put in shape to fight the Axis.

And as the French navy gains in strength and its appreciation in the war effort increases, so will the day draw nearer when the parade New Yorkers saw can be duplicated not only in London or in Africa, but in Paris, in Berlin, in Tokyo and in Rome.

"E" NOT PERMANENT

Coveted Army-Navy "E" pennants, given to war plants for outstanding production records, cannot be flown in perpetuity. Tremendously appealing to pride of management and workers, they testify to the fact that here are plants which, having established those records, are leaving no stone unturned to maintain them. Continued possession—this involves the right of the workers to wear "E" buttons—is strictly contingent upon undiminished flow of products.

Two plants have just had borne in upon them the realization that what the Navy confers the Navy can take away when production schedules are far in arrears. One in New Jersey, employing 2,500 persons, lost its "E" pennant for excessive loss of man-hours in the last four months of 1942. There had been a brief strike at the plant, but subsequently there were work stoppages through absenteeism.

Another plant this penalized was in Connecticut and hearings now in progress at Washington will determine whether two other plants shall lose their pennants. The lesson in these instances is that the Navy's imprimatur for excellent work can only be expected in an all-out war where workers and management are filled with enthusiasm for their tasks and produce results accordingly.

The situation in Washington recalls at least one ancient wheeze: Many men, many minds.

THE TIMID SOUL By Webster

ELL SAILORS ELEPHANTS" ERICK HAZLITT BRENNAN

"Gee, sailor," he said, "can this one, by any chance, run?"

"Maybe," said Seaman Linn, cryptically. "Is there another stall we can rent? We better get him outa sight."

Voice Garvey looked at Ten Percent.

"By all means, Mr. Linn," gasped the Voice, "and in a jiffy, too!"

Fireman Dunnevan had finally caught up.

"But Benny—what we want with two horses?"

"Wait an' see, Tim," said Seaman Linn.

Any serious writer on grand strategy would label this situation The Fog of War and hasten on to a scholarly analysis of The Enemy's Forces.

Mr. Bert Sedgwick, The Enemy, was at this moment on the verge of a fateful decision. Ostensibly playing tennis doubles with his fiancée, Miss Templeton, as partner, on the courts of the Coronado Hotel, his thoughts were some twenty miles up the coast. He could not keep his mind away from the Del Mar race-track (Where the Turf Meets the Surf). That telephone call yesterday afternoon—

"Take it, Bert!"

"Oh... sorry—"

"How could you have missed such an easy ball?"

"I'm sorry, Elnora. I'll get the next one."

"It's your serve, darling!"

"Oh... right!"

... That telephone call from those Virginians, Linn and Dunnevan... what did it mean? That chap, Linn, had said they had bought Erin Go Bragh at the auction, and would sell him back for fifteen hundred dollars. But only because they were southerners with a high sense of honor—

"Fault!"

"Oh, Bert... for Pete's sake, wake up!"

"Right, dear!"

... Of course, it was just a slick sales talk. All that rot about Pop lying to him. Pop said Erin Go Bragh had had feet and he did have bad feet. But what if the horse had got well since Santa Anita? What if those Virginians were telling the truth? Gah, he'd feel swell if Erin Go Bragh went out and won a race—

"No, Bert, don't hit it again!"

"Eh?"

"Game's over. Love set. Theirs!"

"Oh, I am sorry. Played wretchedly."

... Ha ha ha! How silly to keep thinking about that dog, Erin Go Bragh. Nothing to it, absolutely nothing. Those fellows had made a bad buy and merely wanted to trick him. Southern sense of honor... ha! Not when it came to racehorses. Still, that Linn had sounded awkward and sincere—

"Bert! What's got into you? Why didn't you congratulate Commander Bingham? Just walked off—"

Sedgwick could stand the torment no longer. The fear that he might be like the editor who turned down Kipling, or the man who sold his interest in the Ford Motor Company for a song, or the poor boob who unloaded Gallant Fox for six hundred dollars, was insupportable.

"Angel," said Bert to Elnora, "I've got a few business matters to straighten out. I'll skip luncheon with you and be back in plenty of time for a swim—"

"Business? Oh... yes."

"Won't be long, dear."

"Bert! You look guilty! It isn't horses?"

"Horses? Nonsense! Ha ha ha! See you soon!"

Miss Templeton looked after him worriedly. But she did not arouse to absolute suspicion until, passing the hotel desk, the clerk handed her a telephone message.

"For Mr. Sedgwick."

"Oh, yes... thank you."

The slip of paper was not folded and the words of the message seemed to wriggle like a snake. She said then: "Mr. Linn called. Says

Mr. Sedgwick can see them at the Del Mar Hotel any time this afternoon."

Elnora's lips compressed and her eyes smoldered dangerously.

Thus, it should be noted that The Enemy was not acting in good judgment, that his morale was not of the best and that this Main Support, the Home Fleet, as it were, was apt to start off on a dangerous tangent. But lest any students get the idea that Linn & Dunnevan were going to win easily, the historian would be bound to refer to what is known, in naval parlance, as The Imponderables.

These Imponderables were named Millicent and Georgine. And, at the very moment Bert Sedgwick was setting out for his interview with the Virginians, the two young ladies, M. & G., were in conference with one Yeoman Webster of the U.S.S. Trimble. Not Virginians, but San Diegans, Millicent and Georgine had a definite and sometimes almost sentimental interest in Seaman Linn and Fireman Dunnevan.

They sat upon stools at the Padre Drive-In on "B" Street receiving startling intelligence from Yeoman Webster. A superior, blond and noisy young man, Yeoman Webster loved to tell the tale, nor was he above adorning it and pointing a moral.

"I guess you girls heard about Tim and Benny?"

"Yeah, Benny's in the brig."

"Tim's flat busted."

Yeoman Webster shook his head dejectedly to tell you, he said, "Tim's uncle died and left him eighty thousand dollars."

"Hurley Webster, what a lie!"

"I saw the check myself. The Cap'n wanted me to take it to the bank for him, but I was too busy. And guess what—for a sheer surprise? Tim bought a racehorse. Paid ten thousand dollars for it. The both of them got a five-day liberty and they've gone to Del Mar!"

Millicent slid off her perch.

"Thanks, Hurley," she said, "you're awful sweet to tell us."

Georgine, a more complex character, muttered things into her beer.

"Sailors! she said, "Always hanging around when they're broke. Talkin' low-down to a girl when they ain't got a dime. I knew Benny couldn't be trusted but I did think Tim was true blue."

She looked hurt and, also, embittered.

"Come on, Georgine," said Millicent, "we just got time to catch the bus."

Georgine paused for a further grim reflection on life.

"Ten thousand bucks for a horse!" she said. "Why wasn't I born a horse?"

And Yeoman Webster, who specialized in anti-climaxes, said: "I just thought you ought to know."

This, then, was the general strategic situation as The Enemy, in the person of Mr. Bert Sedgwick, arrived at the Del Mar Hotel for his first contact with Force & Brains, Inc.

He was met in the lobby by that splendid son of the Old South, Mr. Voice Garvey.

"Mahuj Garvey, suh, at yo' service! I am trainin' an' general factotum to Mistuh Dunnevan and Mistuh Linn."

"How nice," Bert said.

He allowed himself to be steered toward a guest cottage on the sea side of the hotel. There was no scent of magnolia blossoms, but the odor of mint juleps emanating from Major Garvey was entirely authentic. As an added touch, just at the threshold of the Virginians' cottage, a small dark bowed and scraped.

"Dey's waitin', Mistah Voice—Mistah Mahuj, sah!" announced The Pearl.

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE
Arresting mystery-melodrama based on an intriguing topical theme, is promised in "Nightmare," coming today to the Grand Theatre. As potentially outstanding entertainment, the film is additionally enhanced by a superlative cast headed by Diana Barrymore and Brian Donlevy who are co-stars.

Interesting advance data concerning the picture reveals that the plot is based on a story by Philip Macdonald. It deals with the murder of one Captain Stafford, portrayed by Henry Daniell, and the strange series of events which subsequently implicate his estranged wife, played by Miss Barrymore.

RITZ THEATRE
Chorus girls of the dumb blonde type have been supplanted by the dumb redhead in recent scripts. Reason: the studio has found a talented comedienne in Kay Harris, who made her bow in "Little Toller." A titan-topped beauty, Kay appears in "Lucky Legs," now at the Ritz Theatre.

BRISTOL THEATRE
"George Washington Slept Here," based on the Broadway laugh success by Kaufman and Hart, is the offering at the Bristol Wednesday and Thursday.

The film stars Jack Benny and Ann Sheridan as the city couple, Bill and Connie Fuller, who buy a house where George Washington once slept.

petitioner, Mrs. Geddes, questioned Geddes' good faith in the matter from the start.

"Is it not true that you have just recently started to write to your daughter and try to get in her good graces because you know that she is going to study nursing and you might be able to borrow some money from her?" Attorney Achey asked Geddes.

"No, that's not the truth at all, and you know it, Achey; don't accuse me of that," Geddes replied.

Edwin Satterthwaite, attorney for Geddes, informed the Court that his client was "very willing" to continue paying the $4 a week order starting at once.

"I imagine he would be," Achey declared. "We not only want him to continue the $4 order but we want him to pay up a part of his just debt, too."

Judge Keller said that he would not hold Geddes in contempt of court but that he would continue the case on condition that Geddes pay $250 of the arrearages and $4 a week, the arrearages to be paid in a $100 down payment within a week, and then $8 a week, of which $4 is to apply on the balance of the arrearages and the other $4 for the continuance of the weekly order. The money is to be paid to Probation Officer Horace E. Gwiner, who will turn it over to Mrs. Geddes to be used for the payment of the daughter's expenses in nurse training at Reading. If this order is not kept up, Geddes will be brought into court for contempt, the Court warned him.

Today's Quiet Moment

(By the Rev. James R. Galley)

Pastor, Bristol Presbyterian Church

O Lord our God, Whose wisdom is infinite and whose knowledge is eternal, we thank Thee for placing us in the world in a day when absolute devotion to Thee is demanded on the part of all Thy professed followers; when sacrifices are necessary in order that Thy work might continue and Thy Kingdom be advanced. Cause us to be more consecrated in our giving and more devoted in our service. May we recognize the divine ownership of all things—even life itself; and may we consecrate ourselves anew and completely in the service of Him through Whom alone the world may be blessed with peace and with life. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

"I'm worried about Ma..."

This boy is a casualty.

A few days ago, he was a hardened fighting man—with a glint in his eye and a set to his mouth that boded ill for his Axis foes.

Tonight he's just a bewildered lad. Bad news from home has hit him—and put him out of action—as effectively as an enemy bullet. Desperately he has tried to solve a problem back home; his mother ill, lonely, helpless—and apparently nothing he can do about it.

Tortured by doubt and uncertainty, he's come to the Red Cross Field Director for help.

He'll get it.

It is the job of Red Cross Field Men to unravel human snarls. Across their desks, sometimes no better than battered crates, more than 1,500,000 men in the past year have poured their troubles—have asked for and received counsel and assistance. Daily and nightly, with our armed forces from Africa to India, from Iceland to New Guinea, they are keeping up the morale our fighting men must have.

Not only to the fighting men but to War's victims wherever they can be reached the Red Cross is carrying relief supplies, clothing, medicines. The cost is tremendous and ever-increasing.

The Second War Fund is greater than the First, but no greater than the increased needs.

Give more this year—give double if you can.

INTRAMURAL BASKETBALL CONTINUES AT BENSLEM; COOK'S WHITE TEAM SCORES A ONE-POINT VICTORY OVER BLUE

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Mar. 3.—Intramural basketball continued at the Benslem Township High School this week after a delay caused by the school being closed due to the teachers' strike.

In the first game played, Cook's White team scored a one-point victory over Vanzant's Blue aggregation. Final score was 18-17 with E. Dunkerly scoring the winning points for the White team. Dunkerly scored 16 points in the game while F. Carter led the losers with six field goals and a trio of fouls. The victory enabled the Cook lasses to move into a deadlock with Doris Gonzalez' team for second place.

Rumyan's Purple team won the second encounter, defeating Peterson's Orange five, 17-15. It was the first victory for the Purple team and Rumyan herself led the attack of the winners with 9 points.

To date the teams have the following points: Vogt's, 5; Gonzalez and Cook, 4; Rumyan, 2; Peterson, 1; Vanzant, 0; Dwyer, 0.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

All of the implements provided for our army are not war machines. Some you've seen operating in peace time, such as the Caterpillar bulldozer. The Engineering Corps in the Army and Marines uses "Bulldozers" to build roads, to smooth off temporary air fields, camp sites and for many other uses.

Particularly in the South Pacific where there are no roads and tanks and trucks must be moved up to battle zones, the bulldozers and the Engineers must move ahead to clear a road through the jungles. Your purchase of War Bonds helps pay the cost. Buy more and more War Bonds every Payday. "You've Done Your Bit, Now Do Your Best."

ruins, and interrogating employees, in order to attempt to determine what caused the tragedy.

The force of the blast was felt over an area of five miles and more. It has been stated that the blast may have been caused by over-pressure in the vats where plexigum is brewed under terrific heat for molding into glass turrets and noses for aircraft.

The first fatality, Thomas Neely, 41, of Chandler street, Rockledge, need not have met his death, his wife disclosed yesterday. Neely, it has been learned, was not due to report until midnight, an hour and a half after the blast. He had exchanged shifts with a fellow employee who was ill.

Pennsylvania Farm Round-Up

By William Brockman
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

HARRISBURG, Mar. 3.—(INS)—"The farmer of today is thinking about one thing—the necessity of unprecendented food production as a No. 1 war need," according to Secretary of Agriculture Miles Horst.

The farmer is "willing and devoted to the accomplishment of that stupendous task at all hazards," he told a gathering at Philadelphia recently, "but he is confronted with that all-controlling factor over which he has no control—manpower. It is senseless to expect the farmer to plan an expanded production without some assurance that the crops will be harvested."

During the past few months through an influx to industry and the military draft, Horst pointed out, "the farms of the country have lost an estimated two million workers."

"In every community throughout this state and throughout the country, plans must be organized through which every person will accept fully the responsibility of doing a share in the production of food on the farms. Plans properly devised and carried out will assure the production of the necessary food," he added. "The public at large has it within its power to prevent a breakdown in food production."

"A sufficient food supply made possible through the joint efforts of the non-farm resident and the farmer will prove that the system of free enterprise under the principles of democracy is supreme and unbeatable," Horst declared. "It will cause a definite setback to those who harbor the thought that a system of dictation shall, under the emergency which peace may bring, replace the American way."

Ideal conditions for Spring planting are indicated by a report of the Department of Agriculture.

Opening of the Spring season will not be hampered by a lack of moisture in the ground as a normal rainfall and a considerable amount of snow prevailed during the winter.

Temperatures in a number of instances this year have been above normal and in some areas, where the ground is not excessively frozen, farmers are preparing their early plowing.

According to latest compilations by the Department, the value of Pennsylvania's 1942 corn crop exceeded by approximately $10,000,000 that of 1941.

Corn is the state's leading crop both in production and value and approximately 90 per cent of it is consumed on the farms in the production of agricultural products.

The crop's 1942 value was $54,014,000, compared with $44,691,000 in 1941. The increase, it was explained, was due to larger production and higher prices per bushel.

Pennsylvania ranked 15th in production last year among the corn-producing states of the nation, ninth in yield per acre, and 15th in value.

The extent to which wheat is grown as a cash crop in Pennsylvania was shown in a Department report revealing that approximately half of that crop is sold each year by the State's farmers.

The crop in 1941 totaled 16,712,000 bushels. Of that, the farmers sold 8,145,000 bushels or 48 per cent.

providing they have not reached a certain age.

The Board instructed the secretary to write to Senator Howard I. James and Representatives Stockham and Yeakel, suggesting that they support legislation for state-aid for salary increases for teachers.

A new gas stove was ordered purchased for the cafeteria.

S. Bradley Ardrey, who attended a convention of school directors in Harrisburg, gave a report of the sessions.

Mrs. William G. Harding was the only absentee.

In Ranger Tactics

dant of the school, is teaching the Golden Arrow soldiers "to kill before being killed," and aiding them in acquiring a decided aggressor complex.

The curriculum includes every type of warfare thus far observed in the war, it being a collection of effective tactics used by Commandos, Germans and Japanese.

For the program, it required a week to construct a "Nazi village," populated by Nazi dummies. Attacks by groups of soldiers duplicate actual battles. Troops move into the village under real gunfire, with machine guns raking them with fire 30 inches above the ground. Dynamite charges explode while the invaders creep into the village, flat on their stomachs.

Pits were dug in the buildings so that soldiers could safely stay in them to operate pulleys for the dummies which pop out of doors and windows during the invasion.

Other training includes tank-stalking, wire entanglement erection and crossing, cliff-scaling on 200-foot cliffs, toggle-rope bridge crossings, blizz-course reaction with dummy Nazis jumping out of trees and holes to test reaction of troops, hand-to-hand combat methods, camouflage, demolition, etc.

Selected soldiers were first trained, they in turn becoming instructors for the remainder of the division.

That Extra Something!
...You can spot it every time

THE dry cold air and the exertion of skiing bring a mighty thirst. Ask an expert ski instructor what's the perfect drink to find at the end of a ski run. Ice-cold Coca-Cola. For ice-cold Coca-Cola not only quenches thirst, it adds refreshment.

A quality drink made the quality way, Coca-Cola offers all the difference between something truly refreshing and just something to drink. A special blend of flavors gives it a taste all its own. Coca-Cola had to be good to get where it is.

Your own experience, many a refreshing experience, tells you the best is always the better buy.

War-time limits the supply of Coca-Cola. Those times when you cannot get it, remember: Coke, being first choice, sells out first. Ask for it each time.

"Ice-cold Coca-Cola" in the midst of ice and snow! But any ski enthusiast will tell you that's when it's mighty welcome. Coke has what it takes for real refreshment.

The best is always the better buy!
